

Political Pundit

Mike Dillon was a man of varied talents and interests and that included politics. It wasn't uncommon for editorials, or even entire articles, in the Blue Press to take a decidedly political turn.

Mike's opinions on these matters were to the point and well thought out. As those who knew him, or perhaps have been reading these posts about him, would know he also didn't pull any punches. There's a reason he called the warranty a "No BS Warranty", he believed in telling it straight.

Today we have a few examples of Mike's writing on matters of politics from some older editions of the Blue Press. Hopefully you will find these enlightening and even entertaining to read. If you prefer you can access the pdf directly here.
